TEACHING

FYC 4622: Planning and Evaluating Family, Youth and Community Science Programs

Brief Description: Planning and Evaluating Family, Youth and Community Science Programs is a three-credit-hour course that teaches students the philosophy, theory, and process of planning and evaluating family, youth, and community programs. The course emphasizes program planning and evaluation models that are widely used in family, youth, and community sciences as well as other human service education and delivery programs. Course assignments and projects revolve around student-selected social issues. The course is required for FYCS majors.

FYC 6620: Program Planning and Evaluation for Human Services Delivery

Brief Description: Program Planning and Evaluation for Human Service Delivery is a three-credit-hour graduate course that teaches students the philosophy, theory, and process of planning and evaluating family, youth, and community programs. The course revolves around a project consisting of a situation statement, key informant interview, evidence-based program analysis, program logic model and evaluation plan. The course is required for the Master of Science non-thesis option.
